

HOW TO USE LOVE-BOOK:

logo not found or type unknown

Chapter A and Chapter B are your answers to your personal analysis. We will text your book to you on the day of your date.

Using your A and B answers, spot the places where you and your date are similar.

Where you find there are differences of opinion, well, sparks are only made when you rub two sticks together.

While we all seek the love of our life, let us also take it one step at a time, so, why not make a friend first? Get to know each other, stay in touch, one chapter will reveal to you the science behind doing so, it has been proven in testing that familiarity breeds fondness, and if you become fond of someone, the capacity for love increases.

Instead of game-playing, play the dating games we offer. They are designed to make you laugh. I mean, is there anything wrong about having a laugh? It saves having to come up with corny jokes, and silly one-liners that can turn either party off. If you don't want to play along, well, that's okay, but maybe at least try, you might make a friend, you might view your date with a whole new perspective when you let your hair down.

Stay tuned for new Love-Book chapters.

LOVE-BOOK

logo

Where opinions connect

CHAPTER A

logo

Once upon a time test related A-List opinions whilst on a date...

1. Kingdom of heaven
2. Every failure is my strength
3. It is what it is
4. I am complex

5. Take my hand
6. Don't hold back
7. Love is a test
8. Budget
9. Dreamer
10. Kid
11. Fire
12. Gravity
13. Sunrise
14. Tango
15. Comedic
16. Survive
17. Stones
18. Call me
19. Cosmetic
20. U.S.A
21. Kiss
22. I'll get to it
23. Speed up
24. Rhythmic
25. Life of the party
26. Turn on news
27. Love to chat
28. Improve myself
29. Future
30. Low trust Mind
31. Dinner for two
32. Give

33. Friends
34. Olive oil
35. At first glance
36. Burning
37. Eyes
38. Paris
39. Look back on my life
40. Forgive
41. Science
42. Want what I didn't have
43. The sun rises and sets
44. Stars
45. Go for a jog
46. Close your eyes
47. Rev up at red
48. Get it off my chest
49. My Conscience is my guide
50. Sometimes I remember it all
51. Screw the rules
52. We're only here once
53. New Years Eve
54. Soak in the tub
55. I need more time
56. I wish I'd done...
57. Exotic
58. Rock
59. I toe test a waterfall
60. What if I'm wrong?

61. Look at you
62. I could stay a while
63. I need someone
64. Calm as the day
65. Detailed
66. How I have all these questions
67. Money makes the world go round
68. Wait a minute
69. Take the elevator
70. Calm and breezy
71. Hip swing
72. Do you wanna touch me
73. I don't like Mondays
74. Man on the moon
75. Compatibility
76. Daring
77. I'm hard to figure out
78. I find myself when drifting of
79. Clocks watch my time
80. Space is full of stars
81. I get so I really don't care
82. Let's just grab coffee
83. There's less time
84. What a life I have had
85. Restless sleeper
86. Imagine
87. Leopard
88. No doubt

- 89. Diamonds are forever
- 90. Plan B
- 91. First impressions matter
- 92. You get what you pay for
- 93. Defy
- 94. One of a kind
- 95. What if I don't see you
- 96. Echo
- 97. Gotta lot to give
- 98. Stay Perfectly Young
- 99. Inside

CHAPTER B

logo

Later that night... test and date, delved into plan B...

CHAPTER C

logo

True/Not True

It's time to disrupt your date... in a good way

Let's play True/Not True:

Both of you share something you are thinking right now.

Then guess- True or not true?

You're getting the drift of this now, right?

No?

Okay, here's an example to point you in the right direction.

What's something you did to get ready for tonight?

Was the answer you shared True or Not True? Which answer did your date select?

Now...go with the flow and ask your own True/Not True's.

CHAPTER D

logo

Now for something completely different. If your like most people on a date, your probably hoping the heavens erupted, and sparks rained down to electrify your world with spine shivering chemistry. Sure would be convenient wouldn't it? Ahh, but God would have to invent rubber wouldn't he? Otherwise how would we all keep grounded? So just when Love-Book was making sense, it became an issue when the two of you were a little blasé about your prospects. At this juncture, we want to let you know this...

It takes the human eye 3-9 seconds to decide if we are attracted to someone. Yes we are onto the pair of you. In fact if your still reading this, maybe your feeling a little unsure, a lot Ho-Hum about seeing each other again. And that's okay, it is your Love-Book prerogative. Yet; all connection is valuable. Did you know...

We tend to feel safe with familiar people, as it is likely we know what to expect from them. Dr. Robert Zajonc (1968) labeled this phenomenon the mere-exposure effect. More specifically, he argued that the more often we are exposed to a stimulus (e.g., sound, person) the more likely we are to view that stimulus positively. Moreland and Beach (1992) demonstrated this by exposing a college class to four women (similar in appearance and age) who attended different numbers of classes, revealing that the more classes a woman attended, the more familiar, similar, and attractive she was considered by the other students. There is a certain comfort in knowing what to expect from others; consequently research suggests that we like what is familiar. While this is often on a subconscious level, research has found this to be one of the most basic principles of attraction (Zajonc, 1980)

Even if your not sure about each other. Even if your not that into each other. The facts are true... IF you give each other just one more chance. IF you give each other just one more date. IF you give each other just one more day.

Familiarity breeds fondness. Fondness breeds attraction. Maybe you might become friends... Maybe one day, you might like each other more. Can frogs become princes? Can ducks become swans?

The story continues.... If you'll let it.

CHAPTER E

logo

A word from our inventor

"I have spent 30 years in the dating economy. It has been a place I could never leave, it has given me a purpose I could believe."

Love-Hub came to me in 2019. I was sitting at my kitchen counter when two words entered my mind "Love-Number." They repeated themselves, echoing vastly across the synapses in my brain. Next, I asked, "What's a Love-Number?" I wrote that on my electric bill. Like you, I had yet to learn. It annoyed me. Still, it made me ask, "What if there were a Love-Number. What would that be?" Followed by, "If there were, how would I calculate it?" Then I did what everybody else would do and googled Love-Number. I found the typical mystical approach, where you add up your birthdate kind of stuff, and that means you have a Love-Number.

Since most of the world doesn't bother with numerology, I figured it's because of its lack of scientific or religious backing. Perhaps a different approach was needed if I were to go on a journey to calculate a Love-Number. If a number is to be calculated, it should be wholly on the principle of a mathematical equation wherein input creates output through logic. To get to this book, you helped both you and me with that. It took me three years to simplify and codify a logical math that could be described as a Love-Number. For most people to fall in love, it is a deep feeling of connection. If we take human connection and ask what causes it, I conjecture opinion offers two inputs. One where opinion connects us and the other where opinion forces us to collide. Logically love is created through human connection, but an illogical collision could create love too. It made sense to me that words would be needed to arrive at a number then.

Those words would need to be emotive, words that we loved, words that we had feelings for, words that, if chosen, would connect.

Thus logic led me to offer numbers with words, and naturally, there are really only a few things where numbers and words are accepted as conjoined, crosswords, quizzes, opinion polls, etc. As a useful tool and for practical purposes, I spent time focussing on a quiz. This proved extremely difficult. How to quiz a human and wonder if the answers would emote a probability of a Love-Number. It drove me a little insane. There were multiple times when I became sleep deprived. A symphony of doubt would plague me, an orchestra of skepticism swelled with violins of violation.

Still, I could not shake the need to move forward. When the silence came, when the exhaustion set in, I found solace in the thought, "But what if...what if love could be measured by math and words?" and then something else hit me, "Could love could be measured by math, music, image, and word?" Now that question seemed to answer itself with "Yes." After all, we love movies, right? And a movie is math, music, image, and word. There was the epiphany...what if I created a quiz you watched, listened to, and participated in through logically understandable computer math. All computer code is binary, 1 and 0, A and B. Thus the simplification became obvious. An A/B analysis of opinion completed while watching a 4k movie with a soundtrack. Something that could be loved, something that was cool. Then I realized, heck yeah, that's literally the coolest invention to happen for dating in decades, if not centuries. I mean really, Eharmony patented a long test, and Tinder patented a swipe, but I was about to patent something much more significant. Something that could mathematically predict emotional compatibility. You tell me, if two people mostly share the same opinions, are they emotionally compatible?

A wave of words poured out of my mind. They pointed me to do this; compose a quiz to music, using words and short sentences that would analyze our thoughts. I thought of words that evoke emotion, drama, comedy, love, or romance that posed the mind to find an emotional response. In 30 years of dating, what I have found is most singles end up describing themselves as "Outgoing, down to earth."

Etc, those words made no definition of their soul. Well, I sure hope you enjoyed my little invention, and while I do not pretend to proffer that you will find the love of your life because of this invention, what I will say is I proffer that you are mathematically more likely to compared to a swipe, or just finding a golfing partner.

Thanks for your participation, and please continue to enjoy Love-Book and all the other contributions I offer to disrupt dating. I'm glad you joined the disruption!

CHAPTER F

logo

For men

Styling tips:

If we are to disrupt dating, why not disrupt how you date? Guys, let's get our flair on.

Why do we like women? Well, when they look amazing, we lose our breath. When their hair cascades, their nails perfectly manicured, toes to pinkie, and those sweet heels put the perfect shape, the collar feels hot under the skin. When their smile flashes bright, we feel a warm embrace of reassurance "she likes me," and when she laughs at our cracks, we think, "she really likes me."

Well, Love-Book wants you to optimize the opportunity to get that laugh. Here are a few tips:

A. We can learn a little from the hotter sex. Let's style our hair the way they like it. If you've got short hair, part it, do a high part, and use something that keeps that parting perfect, not a hair strand loose. It's a throwback look to a time many women remember with fondness- the '50s and '60s. If you want to disrupt, set that parting up and slick it. It's a sure-fire winner on every date you'll ever go on. If you're all grey, try a little dye, or go dark brown; it's THE most popular hair color for a guy to have. If you're balding, go for the full Monty. Have a barber shave your head. It did just fine for Bruce Willis, The Rock, Yul Brynner, Telly Savalas, Ed Harris, Patrick Stewart, and many more. Women fall over all of these guys. They have the confidence and charm to care less whether there is a root or stand left. So should you. So go full Monty. For a Machismo look to Jason Statham style and have the perfect stubble head. It'll give you a natural tough guy look. And that's always a turn-on!

If you've got long, thick hair...scrap the ponytail, let your locks flow. Your dreamy head will have your lady is thinking about how she'd love to run her hands through those waves, and who knows maybe that's where it will head!

Nails. Clip and file, clip and file. Whatever you do, get rid of any dirt underneath. Flip the switch; what if your lady showed up with chipped nails and dirt underneath them, and every time she picked up her knife that black stuff under her nails kept hitting your line of sight.

Clothes. Iron, press, starch, dry clean, press, starch. The shirt is where she notices a real man. It's the measure of the guy who wears that classic white crisp shirt perfectly pressed with just a button or two undone. It's got cool, calm, and collected stamped all over it. Want to disrupt? Go Johnny Cash; once you go black, you never go back. A black shirt, well, you gotta pull that off. It works best with well-tanned skin. You could go with other colors, but Love-Book advises you to play the numbers, and crisp white or black is the greatest winner of all.

Shoes. Brown or Black. Leather or Suede. Socks are not required. We are here to disrupt. Leather must be spit shine clear. Suede gotta Brush smooth.

Pants. Navy Blue, Black Jeans. Dress pants pressed. Jeans....a cool rip or two, but very very clean, fit perfectly, not one inch baggy.

Teeth. It's the 21st century. You can get white Strips for $20. In fact, if you've read this far. Text your Love-Life Secretary because we want our members to disrupt all the other options, and we'll send you FREE white strips. Let's have you gleam!

Scent. Last gents. Let's have scent, learn to spritz the air in front of you, and walk into the spray, so it lands on you. Why? Well, the smell shouldn't emanate from you all over. What's remarkable is that your cologne is detected subtly when she finally leans in; thus, you only increase the seduction!

CHAPTER G

logo

As the prince and princess finished their feast. The clock struck midnight, and bell rang beast. Horse and carriage, optioned to west and east. All the mice and men held open doors at least. All the ladies and cats blew kiss goodbye treats. Time to text Abigail the X & O of yes & no beats. Anyone forget a glass slipper? Check those feet.

The End

Maybe...

CHANGE THE PAST

logo

Time travel sure would be a cool date for the two of you to enjoy, and while we are working on our HG Wells Machine, we cordially invite you to go back to a specific year in time (your choice of year). Share with your date what year you're about to go back to, and let them know what you would go back and change (if you could). What would you change so much so that it would alter the trajectory of the world and your life forever?

Guys you go first...